Six Perish In Strait

Continued from Page 1

The survivor said all the men were wearing life jackets, but in the icy water they were unable to hold on to the lifeboat and drifted away into the darkness and death, one by one, "the oldest first."

ONLY TWO LEFT

By morning, only Hanson and deckhand Dick Lothian were left when the Salt Spring ferry Cy Peck on its first morning run spotted the overturned lifeboat. It had drifted eight miles during the night toward Ganges.

Lothian drifted away as the ferry manoeuvred close. He was taken from the water and rushed to hospital, but pronounced dead there.

Hanson, suffering from shock, exposure and multiple lacerations, was reported in fair condition last night.

His suffering was increased in sight of safety when the ferry had to manoeuvre for half an hour to reach him after first sighting his feebly waving hand.

TRAGIC THING

Henry Foss, company president after whom the tug was named, said it was a tragic thing to happen to the "all-star crew."

"They were our best men and they'd been together a long time—25 or 30 years. They were a winning team all down through the years. . . . Until something happened out there."

Mr. Foss paid tribute to the search and rescue crew —"One of the most remarkable organizations on the West Coast."

Bodies of the men were picked up one by one from the icy water by search craft.

The Henry Foss is owned by the Foss Launch and Tug Co., with head offices in Tacoma and offices in Seattle and Port Angeles. The company was author Norman Reilly Raine's inspiration for his "Tugboat Annie" stories.

Labor Leaders Lash Newfoundland Premier

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Smallwood claimed overwhelming support Friday in his bid to kick the International Woodworkers of America out of Newfoundland. From most labor leaders, however, there was sharp criticism.

Frank Chafe, Newfoundland representative of the Canadian Labor Congress with which the IWA is affiliated, attacked Mr. Smallwood's call to the province's 20,000 loggers to form a new union with the help of the premier and a Liberal supporter in the legislature.

He called it "a calculated attempt to deliver a large segment of the Newfoundland electorate into the captivity of a political machine."

T. R. Moore, president and general manager of the strike-bound Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, said Friday night he would be "quite satisfied to meet and negotiate with a union of the kind proposed by Premier Smallwood."

Mr. Smallwood said Friday his office is being deluged with telegrams and phone calls from loggers, most of them favoring the proposal he made Thursday night in a radio and television speech.

In the broadcast, he said the violence—punctuated strike of 1,200 IWA loggers against the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company is "a failure and the IWA itself is a failure."

The premier's speech brought quick comment from labor leaders and politicians.

Claude Jodoin, CLC president, expressed shock at the premier's "intemperate" statements. He said in Ottawa Mr. Smallwood "in attempting to change the whole structure of Newfoundland and Canadian industrial relations proposed a course of action which is beyond his power to do anything about."

District President H. Landon Ladd of the IWA said in Grand Falls, site of the struck Anglo - Newfoundland Company, the "vehemence of Premier Smallwood's hysterical and inflamatory speech is a measure of his government's failure to back his own conciliation board recommendations to the company."

First five-an-ten store was opened by F. W. Woolworth in Utica, N.Y., on Feb. 22, 1879.
